

Christine Pastor-Barsi Bio

Christine Pastor-Barsi is an Aerospace engineer with NASA Glenn Research Center. She graduated with her bachelors of Mechanical Engineering in 2005 and her masters of Aerospace Engineering in 2007 from the University of Dayton. Christine is currently the Propulsion Technologies co-lead with the NASA Hypersonic Technology Project. She currently supports air-breathing propulsion research for re-usable propulsion systems. In her spare time she enjoys photography, reading, and running.